PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

Bulletin.

A CENTURY IN TRANSPORTATION.

In 1807 Fulton's steamboat, the "Clermont," left New York for its first trip up the Hudson. It was the first successful application of steam power to purposes of transportation. The century has seen great strides in the development of transportation.

In 1907—today—one may leave Washington at 3:40 P. M. and be in Chicago at 8:55 next morning.

It is a long leap from the "Clermont" to the "Pennsylvania Special," the eighteen-hour train to Chicago; but it illustrates what progress has been made in transportation and how the railroad has superseded the steamboat in America.

The "Pennsylvania Special" is as far ahead of the "Clermont" in appointments as in speed. Its equipment is entirely Pullman, designed and constructed expressly for the service, and it provides every feature and comfort that experience has shown to be desirable and feasible in railway transportation.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is the "Standard Railroad of America," and the "Pennsylvania Special" is its greatest train.

Other fast trains to Chicago leave at 7:50 A. M., 12:01, 3:40, 5:45, 7:40, and 10:40 P. M. daily. Through sleeping cars are attached to trains leaving at 5:45 and 7:40 P. M.
